NINE O'CLOCK TEA CLUB IN ACTION

FEAST "FIT FOR A KING" SERVED TO FORTY-FIVE IN THE BASEMENT OF THE MODEL CLOTHING STORE FRIDAY NIGHT.

LIST OF THOSE PRESENT

The much advertised and long looked for entertainment to be given by the members of the Nine O'clock Tea Club to their wives and lady friends was held on Friday night and was a grand success from start to finish. The members and invited guests met at eight o'clock at A. B. Hanna's store and during the next half hour General Grant Scott and his experienced Aid were busily engaged organizing and mobilizing the ranks of the hungry women. Promptly at eight thirty the Grand March led by Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Confer, Gen. and Mrs. S. Grant Scott and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hughes started from the meeting place in double ranks to the banquet room in the basement of the Model Clothing Store. Prof. S. Clark Bridges presided at the piano playing a march for the advancing hosts. The column was halted and the gentlemen proceeded to the north side of the forty-foot table leaving the ladies on the south side where they were given the full ritualistic ceremony of adoption into the Secret Work of the order by Worthy President, Grant Scott.

After the beautiful and significant ceremony all were seated at the table where covers had been laid for sixty-four, and all but nine were taken.

Proceeding the ceremony of initiation Mrs. R. A. Confer pulled the silken cords that raised a beautiful silk American flag from its hiding place in the midst of a lovely bouquet of pink carnations that formed the center piece of the table decoration, and while Old Glory floated over the table all present gave a salute to their nation's flag.

Following is the bill of fare served by Caterer McAnally: Roast Turkey, Oyster Dressing, Cranberry Sauce, Oyster Stew, Celery, and Pickles, Olives, Bread, Oranges, Apples and Bananas, Coffee and Fruit Punch.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Burgett, Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Confer, Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Albaugh, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Bartley, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Throop, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dalby, Ed. Hamilton and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Ora Boswell, Chas. Wood and Miss Edna Wells, Cecil Jenkins and Miss Margaret Kreigh, Frank Cannon and Miss Ella Bowman, W. O. Timmons and Miss Ada Yonts, Edgar Van Gorder and Miss Leona Kelley, E. E. Cooman and Miss Jean Selby, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Prevo and Mrs. Margaret Callender, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Crawley and Miss Janette, A. B. Hanna, Earl Lane, Andrew Hirt and Miss Louise O'Hair and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse McAnally and Miss McAnally.

A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Prevo for the use of the room, to Mr. and Mrs. McAnally for the excellent service and to E. C. Hamilton and Miss Margaret Kreigh for very entertaining readings.

The last words of the departing members and guests that disturbed the peace of the quiet December night were "When will We Meet Again; Let it Be Soon."

J. P. Allee and S. A. Hays are home from Martinsville, where they have been since Monday as attorneys in the Jesse D. Hamrick against Thomas E. Hamrick damage suit. These two attorneys, together with Dave Watson of Martinsville, represent Thomas D. Hamrick. All of this week was taken up by Jesse Hamrick introducing evidence and he is not yet done. It will take until Monday night to introduce all of the plaintiff's evidence. The local attorneys hope to have the case case to the jury by the last of next week. Thomas Hamrick is the father of Arthur Hamrick of Greencastle. Jesse Hamrick, an Indianapolis attorney, is a brother of Thomas Hamrick.

Prof. North was in Indianapolis on business Saturday.

SNOW FALLING WINTER IS HERE

SECOND COATING OF WHITE WITHIN THE PAST WEEK NOW COVERS THE GROUND AND ISSUES THE CHRISTMAS MONTH INTO OLD PUTNAM

NOW THINKING OF SANTA

With the second fall of snow sufficient to cover the ground, within the past week, the Christmas month is issue into Old Putnam. Winter is here and to those who love the Christmas month, the white covering of the ground is most welcome.

The Christmas spirit is beginning to be felt in many places. The housewives are busy preparing gifts for their friends. The merchants are unpacking the Christmas goods and preparing for the Christmas rush of business. The snow Saturday caused the lads and lassies to think of the sleds put away last spring and some of them went so far as to get them out to wear the rust off of the runners.

Yes, Christmas soon will be here

Thirty Methodist Colleges of the United States are to conduct Student Evangelistic Meetings for a period of one week in the next two months. Twenty-six of the colleges will hold their meetings next week. The meetings will be under the direction of the Student Committee of the General Conference Commission, on Aggressive Evangelism. Dr. K. W. Robbins will give addresses at the Central Wesleyan College, a German Methodist Institution, at Warrenton, Mo. His first address will be given Monday evening. Dr. Robbins will be at the college all of next week, delivering evidence addresses and giving six hours each day to interview with students. The meeting at DePauw will be held during the last of January.

A. J. Nelson went to Coatesville Saturday morning on business.

OUR GREENCASTLE BOYS.

Perhaps the sweetest and the keenest joy of a mother's heart is the boy whom she loves and for whom she is willing to toil and to suffer and sacrifice. Whatever helps that boy to be a better man repays to heart of the mother. She loves the people who take an interest in her boy's welfare. Why should she not? When old age comes if that boy is strong, sober, industrious and upright, that aged mother leaps upon his arm and feels secure in her brave son's strength. W. J. Bryan a Christian patriot, said in an address in Nebraska that he felt like making an apology to the mothers for having kept silent so long upon a question which is of such vital concern to them.

No single act in the life of W. J. Bryan has so endeared him to the hearts of his countrymen as taking a stand against Dahlman, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Nebraska on the ground that the saloons, brewers and distillers all over the country had set their hearts on making this man governor—see the future ruin of his party. Mr. Bryan took a stand against Dahlman and defeated him. Joseph Folk, the Democratic Ex-Governor of Missouri, and one of the bravest men living said, "When I find what the Brewers the Distillers and the Saloon keepers want then I know what to do. I go after the very opposite thing. They don't serve the people. They do serve themselves."

The Hon. W. J. Bryan voiced exactly the same sentiment in Nebraska and in so doing defeated Dahlman. Since Mr. Bryan performed that heroic service for the better element of his party and the honor of the people he has been degraded with letters begging him to stand unmovable against saloon domination in politics. Mr. Bryan stood for county option in Nebraska. The brewers and distillers stood against county option. It did not suit them. They seemed to think county option pleased the real temperance people. Mr. Bryan thought so too. He stood by the people. In the State of Indiana the word is being given out that brewers and distillers do not want the county option law. Whether this is true or not we may not know as yet. We do know they did not want it in W. J. Bryan's state, Nebraska. If they do not want a county option law in Indiana this is enough for every citizen who desires to save and serve the people. All such citizens do want the county option law. Of course so far as the voters of Putnam county are concerned they have already pronounced upon the question by an overwhelming majority without reference to party, and by an overwhelming majority the voters of Putnam county will again declare for local option if they are once convinced that this law does not suit brewers and distillers who serve no party but self.

People love their homes; parents love their children. Putnam county is free from saloons. According to an article which appeared in the Herald some weeks ago conditions are much better. True some families drink in a more private way, but the open saloon does not tempt the young and the weak day after day and night after night. The question is do we wish to maintain this condition? About fifty men representing all churches and parties took the ground last evening that we should try to get all the voters and as many more who voted for local option in Putnam county to sign a petition expressing entire satisfaction with the present law. George Hanna and Chas. Bridges and the original local option committee were drafted into service again and will set on foot the work of having the petitions signed. The W. C. T. U. had representatives present and the meeting was full of enthusiasm. The committee in charge requested the writer to furnish an article for papers today.

MUST PAY PART TO THE STATE

JUDGE ROSS, OF INDIANAPOLIS, TAKES ACTION IN REGARD TO ESTATE OF HUNYAK KILLED NEAR GREENCASTLE.

JACKSON BOYD'S FEE CUT

An order for administrator and attorney to pay back to the estate a part of the money received for their services was made by Judge Ross in probate court Wednesday when O. E. Harlan, an attorney, appeared before him in response to a request of the court. The amount involved is quite small, but Judge Ross holds that in the case of a decedent who leaves no known heirs, the state of Indiana is entitled to inherit, and it is not proper for attorneys and administrator to "split" the balance after necessary expenses are paid. Under his direction the state will receive $52.89.

Two years ago Petrie Ganchiff, a Hunyak, was killed by a Big Four train, while he was working with a construction gang near Greencastle. Moses Gunter, of this city, a leader among the foreign element, was appointed administrator. A suit was filed against the Big Four, and the railway company settled the case for $150.35. In his final report last May, which report was disapproved by the court, Gunter reported every thing paid out and no balance in his hands. He reported that after the suit was brought he could find no evidence showing the railway company's negligence, hence the suit was settled. Expenses in preparation of this case, including a fee of $1.95 to Jackson Boyd, a Greencastle attorney, and the allowance to Harlan and Gunter, who each received $35.41, or half the balance after paying the expenses of the suit, wiped out the estate.

Judge Ross indicated that while the fees were not large, they evidently were larger than the services performed to the estate warranted. He cut Harlan's fee to $25, Gunter's to $20, Boyd's to $30 and cut the fee of an interpreter from $10 to $5. He gave Harlan's client twenty days in which to file a final report, showing that the order of the court had been complied with.—Indianapolis News.

Attorney Boyd stated Saturday that Judge Ross evidently had acted without fully investigating the case, for, as far as his services are concerned he was much underpaid rather than overpaid.

WHO BOUGHT THE BOOZE IS THE ?

CASE OF JOHN POHLMAN & CO., OF TERRE HAUTE AGAINST W. O. ALLEE, OF ROACHDALE, ON TRIAL IN CIRCUIT COURT.

A $119.65 LIQUOR BILL

Who bought the booze, W. O. Allee of Roachdale or D. Morgan now in his old home "back East." This is the question the jury in the case of the John Pohlman Co., Terre Haute liquor dealers against W. O. Allee of Roachdale, will have to determine.

The liquor company has a bill of $119.65 for a barrel of whiskey and other liquors, against Mr. Allee. Mr. Allee, however, claims that the liquor was sold to D. Morgan and not himself.

The liquor company alleges that Allee bought out the business of D. Morgan and took possession of it. After this deal the company alleges that Allee ordered the liquor of one of their salesmen but had it shipped to D. Morgan, with the understanding that Allee was to pay the bill. Allee claims that Morgan bought the goods and that he is not liable for the payment for them. The bill of goods was sold in October, 1908.

Mrs. C. Robbins, who has been here visiting her nephew, George Gowin, has returned to her home in Coatesville.

The common busy bees may be gradually replaced with the Italian or Cyprian varieties, by removing the old queen and substituting a new fertilized queen of either kind preferred. If she is carefully guarded in a small cage for a few days the bees soon recognize her, and in the course of a few months the old bees will all be dead and the new ones will be of the desired kind. The queen is compelled to lay numbers of eggs daily in order to supply the great loss constantly occurring by the destruction from birds, storms and other difficulties. There should be left plenty of honey for a winter supply, and the hives should be well protected from storms. What the beekeeper should aim to do is to sow such crops as will enable the bees to lay in a large supply of honey, and he can well afford to do so if he has a number of hives.

When the green stalks are given to hogs care should be used to prevent cattle from having access to the woody fibre which the swine will leave after chewing the stalks. Pigs relish chewing the stalk for the sweetness in it, but leave enough saccharine matter in the fibre to make it attractive to cattle especially the younger stock. This fibre is indigestible, and the cattle, if allowed to pick it up, will frequently eat a sufficient quantity to cause impaction and harmful if not fatal results. It is not safe to let the cattle into yards where swine are given green corn stalks.—Coburn's "Swine in America."

The blades and stalks of the corn crop alone contain 45 per cent of the nutritive value of the entire crop. It is what we wrote for the Farmer of last week, and not "5 per cent" as it was printed. We have called attention to this fact several times in order to prompt farmers to give their corn crop when they have live stock to feed as 45 per cent is too great to allow to go to waste.

A Home-Coming

Although a murderer Haas Olsen was a commonplace individual. Had he had a wooden leg or an old mother the papers might have worked up some public interest, if not enthusiasm, in his behalf, but as it was the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter, and Haas, without the aid of counsel even, found himself sentenced to seven years' penal servitude, and was delighted. Seven years instead of twenty! For that was what he had expected.

"Your wife wishes to see you." Haas Olsen was standing lost in thought when the policeman entered and announced Marie. Strangely enough, he had forgotten about her in his excitement, and now that he was reminded of her existence, all the pleasure of relief left him.

"Marie!" It was all he could say and awkwardly and shyly shook hands with her.

"Seven years," she sobbed, "I am not to see you for seven long years—and we have been married only six months!"

"Yes, it does seem like a long parting dear, when you put it that way. A man need not change in seven years, unless he likes, but a woman—" he finished with a groan. "You must go away," he continued, "there is enough in the savings bank to keep you for a year. Go to some quiet country place. My people won't know you. Call yourself Mrs. Hansen. That will be sufficient. But after the first year—"

"I'll work. I can live on little, very little indeed."

"And if the little is not there?" "It shall be—it must be," she cried. "Good-bye, Hans. I must go, but I'll wait for you and as I forgive now, so will I keep my heart for you. Come at any time, you will be welcome always."

They shook hands and separated. Haas Olsen went to Vridsløse, and Marie to Aarhus, and each thought this world a hell.

But time passes, even in jail, and in due course Olsen began to count the days to his release. He had served nearly six years, and though a little doubtful as to what allowance would be made for good behavior, he hoped to be free at the end of the sixth year.

It was characteristic of the man's frame of mind that he should resolve to call on his wife unexpectedly. He found her address, and fate having ordained it that he should be released from Vridsløse the money he had earned proved more than sufficient to pay the railroad fare. In the train he worked himself up to a high pitch of excitement. He pictured his wife, totally oblivious of his existence, enjoying the society of others.

"If she has been unfaithful," he hissed, "I'll kill her."

There was no response to his repeated taps on the cottage door, and he pushed it open somewhat impatiently, and found himself in a square room of comfortable, if modest, appearance. A fire was burning brightly, and it was evident that someone had just tended it. A small table was set prepared for tea, and Haas Olsen noticed with a queer sensation, that the occupant of the cottage was expecting a guest.

"She can't have known I was coming," he muttered, and the longer he regarded the cups and plates, the harder his thoughts became.

"But I'll kill her if there is another," he cried out aloud as he went outside to see if she was coming. He caught a glimpse of a woman's dress among the trees and rushed back into the house, waiting tremblingly behind the door for his wife.

She entered lightly enough, but the moment she caught sight of his passionate face she started back and screamed.

"Oh, so you are surprised," he cried, catching her by the wrists and peering into her face.

"Why, is it really you, Hans?" she exclaimed in relief, but his face hardened.

"Who is the other?" he growled. "You could not have been expecting me."

She guessed his suspicions, and all woman in her was roused, as with a wrench she freed herself.

"You—you think I have been unfaithful," she said in a low tone. "That's what you have been suspecting all these years, while I was working day and night to keep—"

"None of that," he commanded. "Who is the second cup for?"

"Perhaps you have an idea," she replied with flashing eyes.

"If you do not tell me I'll kill you," he cried, grasping her by the shoulder. With a little cry of pain she sprang away.

"You coward!" The reproach maddened him, and he seized her by the throat.

"Mamma, mamma!" A shrill voice preceded its owner into the room, but the moment the small boy entered he stood dumb with terror. Haas Olsen's hands fell to his side.

"That's the second person," Marie moaned, lifting her tear-stained face. "Your son—he will be 6 in a few weeks. Oh, what a home-coming."

The man stood helpless watching her dumbly.

PAINTED HIS HOUSE WITH OPIUM

Silas Morgan, living on Whidbee Island, Washington, found several dozen cans containing a substance resembling paint, and believing a case of red paint had washed ashore, painted his house with the material. On taking a sample to town he was told that the sticky fluid was pure opium and each can was worth about $300. As he had used or spilled nearly thirty cans of the opium he had wasted more than $9,000.—Green-ville News.

Extinction of Chinaberry Tree.

The Atlantic Coast Line has taken steps looking to the extermination of the chinaberry tree. It has long been claimed that this tree is a breeder of the white fly, and as the government has taken a hand and the experts have declared that the pest is bred to an alarming extent in the chinaberry tree, we can but commend the action of the coast line in the matter, and we hope the steps they have taken will encourage others in this country to follow suit. The coast line has given orders that every china tree along its right of way in Florida be cut down.—Fort Meyers Press.

SELF-CONFIDENCE IS WEAKNESS

Matthew 26:31-35, 69-75—December 4
 "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—1 Cor. 10:12.

S. T. PETER has proven to be one of the most helpful of Christ's twelve Apostles, and the secret of his assistance lies in the Scriptural revelation of his human nature, its strength and its weaknesses. He was the first of the twelve Apostles to acknowledge the Master as the Messiah, the Son of God; he was the first of the twelve to deny him. He was the only one of the twelve who drew his sword in the Master's defense and the only one who, later, swore that he never knew him. By Divine arrangement, to him were given the keys with which to open the door to the High Calling—to the Kingdom. At Pentecost he used one of the keys of power and boldly proclaimed to the Jews the opening of the way to glory, honor and immortality.

A little later, at the appointed time, he opened the door to the same High Calling for the Gentiles when, by his preaching, Cornelius, the first Gentile acceptable to God, was received and begotten of the holy Spirit, this fact giving evidence that the middle wall of partition, previously separating Jew and Gentile, had been broken down. Yet, after all this knowledge and special opportunity, this great man subsequently dissembled to the extent of ignoring God's grace to the Gentiles as being sufficient, discriminating between Jews and Gentiles and their equality before the Lord.

But in all these experiences St. Peter displayed the fact that his heart, at its core, was loyal to God, to truth, to righteousness, and that the weaknesses, the faults, the blemishes of his character were of his flesh and not of his real heart intention. For his denial of the Master he wept bitterly. And for his failure to recognize the Gentiles he made full reparation most humbly.

The same exhibition of human nature which makes the Apostle Peter attractive is that which made David, the Prophet and king of Israel, attractive. He was not so saintly that he could not make a mistake. He was not so far above the remainder of humanity that they could not realize in him a fellow-creature. Yet withal he was not so debased as to make him abhorrent. His weaknesses were fully offset by the abundant evidence of his heart-loyalty to God and to righteousness. His very experiences in stumbling and recovery have so saturated his Psalms that they touch a responsive chord in nearly every heart which is loyal to God and which has had any degree of experience with sin and weakness—its own and those of others.

How Others Saw St. Peter

Peter remains even today the most fascinating of that band of men who surrounded our Lord in the days of his earthly pilgrimage. G. C. Morgan said of Peter: "Now I am convinced that in Peter we have the greatest human revelation in the New Testament. I do not say the greatest man in his achievement or in one particular capacity of his being, but the most wonderful revelation of human nature. This man of intelligence was perpetually making blunders. This man of emotions was guilty of such impulse that he worked harm in the very cause he desired to help."

Of St. Peter Southouse says: "Peter was an average man, and for this reason he comes nearer to us than some of his colleagues do. But average men have their splendid moments, such as when St. Peter tried to walk on the water, for in this action he tried to do a thing for which he seemed to have no abilities. He set out to do something of which he had no experience."

Dr. Davis said about St. Peter: "Peter was intellectual. He asked Jesus more questions than any other of the Apostles. The capacity for asking questions is a revelation of the intellect. It may also be a revelation of ignorance; but the man who never asks a question is certainly deficient in his intellectuality. . . . Peter was a man of heart, sobbing and impetuous. His virtues and his faults had their common root in his enthusiastic disposition. It is to his praise that, along with the weed of rash haste, there grew more strongly into his life the fair plant of burning love and ready reception of Truth."

"Take Heed to Yourselves"

One of the great lessons which the Master taught his followers, and which all in the School of Christ must learn, is that, with burning love and zeal for God and for righteousness, we should also have moderation—exercising the spirit of a sound mind. Christ's followers are exhorted to be "wise as serpents and harmless as doves." Their wisdom is not to be merely the selfish kind, which would look out for its own interests, but of the generous kind which looks out for the interests of all, and particularly for the interests of the Lord's cause and for any share therein which he may entrust to us.

In the course of his instructions, Jesus had said to his disciples, in advance of the trying hour of his betrayal: "All ye shall be offended because of me this night; for it is written (in the Prophets), I will smite the Shepherd and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad. But after I am risen again I will go before you into Galilee."—Matt. 26:31, 32.

Then spoke the impulsive Peter, "Though all shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended." (V. 33) Alas! how little did this courageous man understand the nature of the trials and difficulties immediately before him, or realize the weak points of his own impulsive nature. Yet if we are grieved with his denial of the Master, we must rejoice to note his faith and love and zeal, as manifested in his acknowledgment of Jesus as the Messiah and his later declaration that nothing should ever shake his loyalty.

However, it is the specially loyal and ardent that the Adversary seeks most persistently to entrap. Thus Jesus, on this very occasion, explained to St. Peter, "Satan hath desired to have thee that he might sift thee" (Luke 22:31); that he might separate you from your loyalty to Christ and discourage you from discipleship, overwhelming you with fear and with your own weaknesses. The Master added, "But I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not." We may well understand that the same loving Master still assists all of his true, warm-hearted followers, whatever their weaknesses of heredity. We may well understand, too, that he is able to develop all such into strong characters, if they abide in his love, continuing in his zeal.

"Before the Cock Crow" The Master discerned the danger of his loving but impetuous follower, and uttered a warning word, that before cock-crowing he would deny his Master. How improbable this seemed to St. Peter! How he courageously declared, "Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee." And so said all of the eleven. Their hearts were good. And the Lord looketh upon the heart.

Our study now passes to verse 69. The Master had been arrested. The scattered disciples had fled. St. John, because of an acquaintance with the high priest's family, penetrated further into the palace than St. Peter, who stood in the court-yard. A maid of the palace recognized St. Peter as one of Jesus' disciples and so declared publicly. Fearful that he might share the fate of the Master, St. Peter denied his identity, declaring that he knew nothing about the matter. A little later another declared the same.

Peter emphasized his denial with an oath, declaring that he knew not Jesus. Later the word spread throughout the court-yard and many took it up, declaring that they believed what the maid said and that St. Peter had the Galilean dialect, anyway. To emphasize the denial St. Peter began to curse, and to swear that he knew not the man. Directly after, cock-crowing began. Then St. Peter remembered the words of his Master, "Before cock-crowing thou shalt deny me thrice."

Alas! he had been too sure of his own stability, too confident of his loyalty. He was entrapped by the Adversary along the very line of his boasting. Another account says that Jesus turned and looked at Peter! That look was sufficient. It spoke volumes to St. Peter's loyal heart. It was not a look of disdain, nor one of anger, we may be sure. It was a look of loving sympathy. It melted St. Peter's heart. He went out and wept bitterly. The followers of the Master today, beset by weaknesses and frailties and temptations of the Adversary, have the lesson of St. Peter's experience as a warning to him for assistance, rather than to be self-confident. And those who fall today have St. Peter's experience as a lesson of the Lord's sympathy and pity. They, too, should weep bitterly for transgressions and repent and profit by their experience.

FALLING HAIR

Easy to Stop it and Make it Lustrous and Beautiful.

If your hair is falling out; if you have a dull unattractive hair; or if you need a daily hair dressing, read what Mrs. Hettie Hodgman of Nelsonville, Erie County, Ohio, writes June 3, 1910, about Parisian Sage.

"I used Parisian Sage for falling hair and find it the finest thing I ever heard of. My hair was falling out by combs full, and I could run my fingers through it and they would hang full of loose hair. I washed my hair and got a bottle of Parisian Sage and used two applications, and I could see a great difference. My hair was lustrous and nice and had almost stopped falling out, and by the use of one more bottle it stopped altogether."

For women, for men or for children Parisian Sage is without any doubt the finest preparation for the hair. It is guaranteed by the Owl Drug store to stop hair from falling; to eradicate dandruff and to stop itching scalp in two weeks or money back. It is a most daintily perfumed and refreshing hair dressing free from grease or stickiness, and ought to be in every home where every member of the family could use it daily. Large bottle 50 cents at the Owl Drug store and druggists everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package.

Just what is to be the nature of this conference, and of its action, is not stated. But the fact that the various college faculties of the state are to get together and discuss football, is thought by some to be an indication of sentiment against the sport.

Theater As A Sanctuary.
Of sanctuaries for the eighteenth century debtor the value of the patient theater must not be overlooked. So long as the actor was in the bounds of the playhouse he was safe. There was John Palmer, for instance, who lived in his dressing room at Drury Lane for months. But engagements—even at Drury Lane—come to an end, and at length Palmer was required at the Haymarket. The journey was a dangerous one. Necessity, however, always fosters invention. They packed him in a cabinet in a cart, and called him "scenery."—London Chronicle.

"No substance that refuses to dissolve in water has an odor," says a writer. "For it is the actual substance itself, floating in particles in the air, that appeals to the nose, and not simply a vibration of the air, as in the case of light and sound. The damper a thing is the more powerful the odor it gives off. A pleasant proof of the fact can be had by walking in a garden after rain."

Where the Flowers Go.

Few people have any idea what becomes of the tons of flowers used for decorations at fashionable functions, receptions, church weddings, and the like. Of course it is an understood thing that the altar flowers taken from the churches each Sunday are distributed among the sick in the various hospitals, but very few imagine, if they give the subject a thought, that society women take pains to see that the beautiful blossoms used in making their homes attractive for an hour or so in one afternoon, are not left to wither and die. Where are affairs is a large one the bulk of the flowers is sent to some hospital and the centerpiece on the table is divided among the guests, each being given half a dozen roses or a handful of daffodils as a souvenir of the afternoon. At church weddings it is considered lucky for the guests to possess themselves of a rose or lily from the chancel.

Down in the settlement districts flowers are often donated by the dealers who are patronized regularly by the women interest in the work, and after a tea or business meeting and reception the flowers are sent out to the poor people of the particular district in which the ladies are interested. It is no uncommon thing to see an entering a poorly furnished, miserably cold room an American Beauty or an orchid or two in a glass of water. No matter how poor or sick or forlorn the members of the unfortunate class seem to appreciate and love the delicate flowers, and are just as eager to own them as their prosperous fellow-creatures. Knowing this, many a society woman takes an armful of her reception decorations down to the slums, and distributes them with a smile, a pleasant word, and perhaps a more substantial evidence that she has other interests than those bounded by the limits of the social world.

Women Lawyers in America.
English women are amazed at the fact disclosed by the last American census that there are over a thousand women lawyers in America. This revelation is beginning to wake up the women of England. There is a large opening for such work in England, especially among the poor, who have literally no one to consult. In the districts where they live the lawyers are usually of the lowest possible type, and are little to be depended upon. Their fees are enormous, and they have no mercy on their clients. There could be no better opening for a woman than to undertake the legal work of the poor. Mrs. Whitney of New York, who lives on the east side and represents the Legal Aid Society, asks only a nominal fee for her services, and does a magnificent work among those she assists with her advice. There are many thousands of humble people who need the services of a lawyer, and who are quite unable to pay exorbitant fees, but this woman of independent means has placed her talent at their disposal.

How to Test Canned Goods.
Canned fruit and vegetables are best opened a short time before needed, that they may be well aired. If fruit has been canned without sugar the necessary quantity should be added as soon as the contents of the can are poured out in order that it may be thoroughly blended.

Fruit and vegetables put away in tin cans should be removed from the cans as soon as opened. The action of the air sometimes causes the acid of the fruit or vegetables to act upon the tin and form a poisonous compound. This holds good also with tinned meats and fish especially.

Fruit purchased in this should be selected with the utmost care as dealers sometimes use cans that render the contents wholly unfit for consumption. The following rules quoted from a popular science journal should be carefully observed in selecting tin foods:

Reject every can that does not have the name of the manufacturer or firm upon it, as well as the name of the company and the town where manufactured. All "standards" have this. When the wholesale dealer is ashamed to have his name on the goods, beware of them.

Reject every article of canned goods which does not show the line of resin around the edge of the solder of the cap, the same as is seen on the seams at the side of the can.

Press up the bottom of the can; if decomposition is beginning the tin will rattle the same as the bottom of your sewing machine oil can does. If the goods are sound, it will be solid and there will be no rattle to the tin.

Reject every tin that shows rust around the cap on the inside of the head of the can. Old and battered cans should be rejected. If they have been used several times they are liable to contain small amounts of tin or lead.

Bow! Wow!
Old Lady (to chemist)—I want a box of canine pills.

Old Lady (indignantly)—I want you to know, sir, that my husband is a gentleman.

Chemist puts up some canine pills in profound silence.—Pick-Me-Up.

Mamma—I thought there was an apple on the sideboard and I was going to give it to you, but it has disappeared.

Fred—Well, you can give me something in the place of it, mamma, 'cause the apple wasn't much good any way.

AUTO COLOR SCHEMES.

"We're driven to our wits' end," said the head of a big automobile agency, "in trying to cater to customers who demand originality and individuality in the color scheme of each machine they order. The cry for 'something different' is what we get tired of hearing. With all the luxurious cars which pass up and down our streets every day it's no easy job to meet the demand for originality. Where a limousine is to be of solid dark color we always try to get a shade that is more or less unusual and then give some individual touch by painting the wheels a contrasting color and perhaps outlining the paneling to match. When a striped body is wanted we have to resort to all sorts of schemes to be original. Two shades of the same color in alternating stripes with a couple of hairlines of black, white or yellow between is a good combination, and by varying the width of the stripes it's possible to obtain many different effects even with the same colors. Moldings of contrasting color are always effective. One stunning machine we sent out last week was a dull olive with black moldings just outlined with a hairline of white. Another good idea which takes well is to introduce a contrasting color or shade in the little panel in the door. Women are especially interested in the color schemes of their machines and often bring up samples of the exact color they want used."—New York Sun.

A DRINK IN GOTHENBURG.

From Gothenburg, Sweden, a correspondent writes: "The difficulties under which wine and spirit merchants labor nowadays here may be judged from the following incident. When I went to buy a bottle of whisky the other day I was told: 'We are not allowed to sell wine or spirits over the counter.' 'What in the world do you mean?' I asked. 'No, it must be ordered in advance.' 'But I want the whisky at once!' The assistant meditated and then said: 'If you go across the street and telephone to use from the cigar shop we can supply you.' I telephoned and five minutes later I had the whisky. I went for another bottle the next day and found the regulations had become more stringent. Although I had ordered it by telephone, I was not allowed to take it home myself! I expostulated and the wine merchant said: 'But if your son here with you will accept sixpence for delivering the bottle at your home I could let you have the whisky at once.' My son had no objection."—Chicago News.

MONKEY AS AUTHOR'S PET.

Quick Disposition of Manuscript—Dis- playing Orders.

A Paris contemporary dealing with the love of great men for animals gives an amusing account of Chateaubriand and his monkey. When he was engaged in preparing Fontane's works for the press on returning one day he was met by his monkey.

"Ah, you rogue," said Chateaubriand, "your shamefaced look tells of mischief." The monkey was chained up, but as things did not appear much disturbed Chateaubriand thought no more of the matter until it was time to resume work. Fontane's manuscripts were not to be found.

At last Chateaubriand looked in- to the waste paper basket and there were the manuscripts. The monkey had watched his master, and as he had seen him fold a sheet of paper and tear it into four, so he had dealt with Fontane's writings. With much labor they were pieced to- gether and afterward published.

Chateaubriand thought it advisable to see what else the monkey had done. His orders had disappeared from a drawer which was always kept closed. The servants searched every- where for them, but they were not to be found. Nearly a week elapsed before they were traced, and then a domestic noticed that the monkey had suspended them to the cornice in a quasi symmetrical way.

The monkey was given his cage and Chateaubriand replaced him by a cat, which was allowed a place on his master's writing table, and great was the pleasure which he derived in playing with puss—London Globe.

HE COLLECTS PASSPORTS.

There is one man in this city who has an odd job, which is apparently the collecting of seals of the Department of State. He does not often go abroad, in fact he has been on the other side probably no more than four times in the course of his life, and he is now around 50. But for about twenty years he has been in the habit of applying annually for a passport. He writes to the department of state, gets an application blank and has it filled out. He goes to the same notary every time and pays the fees. Then he sends his application and the passport fee to the department and gets his passport back in due course.

Passports are valid for two years without renewal, yet he never misses a year and he fills out a new application every time. Thus he has a collection of papers and seals running back over these years. He never had occasion to use a passport when abroad, but he says it has been a help to him when travelling in this country as a means of identification when that has become necessary in some city in which he was a stranger. The chief idea he has is that some time it might be imperative for him to leave for a foreign country on some business or other and having the passport he would not have to delay for it.—New York Sun.

COWS IN FLY TIME.

Much Money Lost Not Taking Care of Cattle.

The loss occasioned by flies where a number of cows are kept, resulting from a diminished milk yield, is often seriously felt. And we all know how the poor animals suffer from the combined annoyance of heat and insect pests, which always come together, says the Indiana Farmer. It is impossible to entirely exterminate the flies but there are many things that have been used successfully to keep away some of the little pests, resulting in a pronounced gain in comfort of the stock. As manure heaps about the stables are always excellent breeding places for flies, the first precaution should be to allow no manure to accumulate in the stables and to keep the stables sweet and an wholesome.

If not practicable to keep the manure hauled away as fast as made, the manure heaps can be treated with various substances which will kill the larvae of flies. The only way to diminish the number of flies is to stop breeding them.

Some of the fly-repelling preparations have considerable efficiency for a short time after application, but they must be applied at least once a day, and if the flies are very bad, twice a day. This means considerable work, so they are seldom used with systematic regularity. Where there is plenty of stable room, it will be found a great help to screen and darken the stable windows and to keep the doors closed as much as possible, allowing the stock to go in at will for rest and protection during the day. Or they may be stabled throughout the day, turning out in the pasture after milking at night and left there until the next morning. If only one or two cows are kept, blankets of gunny sacking, or old horse fly-blankets can easily be provided, to be kept on the cows during the day. Thin-skinned calves are likely to be the greatest sufferers from the flies and heat, and can hardly be expected to make as much gain in weight unless protection from these annoyances is afforded them. They would better be kept inside during the day, turning out into a yard with some pasturing at night. Careful attention to these things many mean considerable extra work, but one will be more than repaid by the proved yield and better condition of the animals.

A sprained ankle will usually disable the injured person for three or four weeks. This is due to lack of proper treatment. When Chamberlain's Liniment is applied a cure may be effected in three or four days. This Liniment is one of the best and most remarkable preparations in use. Sold by all dealers.
